Keedom Smart Sync Overview:Delayed wound healing and infection in intraocular lens implantation. The intraocular lens (IOL) can be associated with significant complications during wound healing after surgical implantation. We report two cases with delayed postoperative uveitic reaction with a painful IOL, macular edema, and iris hypochromia postoperatively. We suggest that early diagnosis of such complications and recognition of the risk factors will avoid serious consequences such as infection, irreversible damage to the retina or its detachment, and prolonged surgical treatment. IOL explantation should be considered when complications such as hypopyon and macular 09e8f5149f
